

Dan's Papers

Welcomes You To 2000

Dear Loyal Reader:

You will be seeing this configuration a lot during the next twelve months.

40/60/40/00

No it is not a Y2.1K error. It represents the 40th anniversary of Dan's Papers. 1940 is the year I was born. 1960 was the founding of the paper. 2000 is the 40th anniversary. You figure it out.

Some have suggested this is the longest run by any founding publisher/editor to date. It is not. There is a publisher/editor in Texas who started a newspaper at the age of 18 and has been running it 77 years. He owns a small plane and delivers the paper by dropping bundles from the air to the owners of the rural delis and gas stations in his delivery area.

We expect to have many events, parties, book signings and contests during this 40th year.

Here's the first:

1. Guess how many articles I have written during the first 40 years.
2. Now guess how many articles I will write during the next 40 years.
3. In less than 100 words, describe three of your favorites, that either myself or others have written in the first 40 years or that myself or others will write in the next 40 years.

Now answer the following multiple choice questions.

4. I have read every article that has ever appeared in Dan's Papers during the last 40 years.
 - a.) yes
 - b.) almost (explain).
5. The most important event during the last 40 years has been
 - a.) the founding of Dan's Papers
 - b.) something else (explain).

The most imaginative entry wins four tickets to a Broadway show. Send the answers to these five questions along with your name and address to "This has been a lot of work," c/o Dan's Papers, Box 630, Bridgehampton, NY 11932. Deadline is January 1, 2040. No, February 15, 2000. Winners announced February 18, 2000.

You know, I couldn't have made the 40th anniversary without you...

Thanks.

It's tough to get the right loan.

"You can tell they really

IPI introduces our One Step construction loan. Great rates. Zero points. Single closing.

At IPI, we understand just how difficult it can be to buy land and to build your dream house. Typically, you'd start with a short-term land loan, then go to a construction loan and finally an "end loan" or conventional mortgage. And typically, you'd pay points or fees every step of the way. Not to mention the aggravation of separate closings.

Not anymore. IPI is proud to announce our One Step construction loan. It's the only zero-point, single-closing land/construction/end loan available that is underwritten entirely on site in our Main Street, Bridgehampton office. This comprehensive program offers you a single interest rate for all three phases of your project, from beginning to end. And most important, IPI locks in your interest rate—in advance, at no additional cost—for 12 months, not for 60 days like other brokers or banks.

We can offer innovative programs like our One Step construction loan because we've consolidated our loan officers, processors, underwriters and closers under one roof. Our experienced mortgage professionals represent more than 100 preferred lenders, so we can find the best possible program at the best possible price for you. And because IPI is the largest mortgage broker in the Northeast, you get the best of two worlds: New York big and Hamptons local.

January Sales

CAVEAT EMPTOR (BUYER BEWARE)

Don't be misled by advertisements for European goose down comforters at supposedly "SALE PRICES". We'll show you that most of those ads do not represent good values at all. Just because these advertisements are from major departments stores - do not be fooled-all down is not alike.

The quality of goose down is measured in fill power (also know as loft). Fill Power is the amount of cubic inches one ounce of down will fill. Our 800 plus Siberian Goose Down will fill between 800 and 850 cubic inches of space. "The Company Store" catalog always lists the fill power of their goose down. Bring in their catalog and we'll generally save you 50% off their prices.

Goose Down Comforters are an investment, with proper care a fine quality comforter will last a life time. Our high quality 100% cotton shells, or tickings, are divided into baffle boxes. The baffle box has a mesh channel separating the top from the bottom of the comforter. The baffle allows the down to give you maximum loft without collecting in one section of the comforter. We do not cater to the consumer that is more interested in price than quality. Our most valuable asset is our customer. We will only sell a product that we believe to be the highest value at the best price. Cheap low quality down should fill garage cans not pillows and comforters. All our goose down pillows and comforters contain 100% goose down even though it is legal to combine 70% down and 30% feathers and label the item 100% goose down. Remember feathers are those things with quills, down is similar to tiny balls of cotton, absolutely no hard quill. Our goose down comforters and pillows are machine washable because they only contain down.

The larger the individual down cluster the higher the fill power. The higher the fill power the better the comforter will insulate thus providing more comfort to you. Since you are spending 1/3 of your life in bed it should be as luxurious as possible. - Why not?

First Flag

New Evidence Suggests Flag In Riverhead Was The First American Flag Ever

By Dan Rattiner

It's funny how something can go from an important piece of history to a worthless reproduction and then back again. Nevertheless, that is what has happened to a particular American flag, clearly several centuries old, that is on permanent display in the Suffolk County Historical Society in Riverhead. The flag, which is called the Hulbert Flag, was found amongst a lot of junk in the attic of a private home in Bridgehampton in 1927. It was already very old at the time and since it had thirteen white stars on a field of blue and since a Captain John Hulbert of Bridgehampton had formed the Bridgehampton Militia to help fight the British in 1775, two and two were added together and a claim was made that this was the first Stars and Stripes ever sewn.

As you will see from reading further into this article, given the confusion and misinformation that surround this situation, the claim may well have merit. The flag has been displayed on tour in various museums on the East End since 1927 and it has been visited by thousands of school children who passed before it in appropriately silent reverence.

"Betsy Ross did not make the first American flag," teachers tell these children. "The first flag is right here."

In the summer of 1997 however, the Hulbert flag was moved from its place of prominence in the Suffolk County Historical Society Museum and demoted to a back wall. A Maryland textile expert named Fonda Thomsen had examined the flag and she found that a sewing machine that twisted the cotton in a counterclockwise direction had been used in sewing the red stripes onto the white background and that this way of twisting the thread and this kind of sewing machine did not visitors a fee to wander through Betsy Ross' house.)

Three weeks ago however, the Hulbert flag was back in its place of prominence in the museum. Another textile expert had been brought in. A woman with the odd name of Rabbit Goody from Cherry Valley, New York which is upstate near Cooperstown. Miss Goody said that the counterclockwise machine thread had only been used on some of the horizontal red stripes and from the way it was applied it was only put there as a repair.

The rest of the flag was made of the well-known, three-ply, hand spun sewing cotton in use in revolutionary times. There wasn't the slightest doubt that this was an original Revolutionary War flag, she said. As to whether it was the first flag or not, she said, she had no idea. "I'm only an expert in textiles, not in history," she said. "But there's no doubt in my mind that this flag was made right about the time the country declared its independence."

The Hulbert claim to being the first flag is only supported by the fact that it was found in Bridgehampton where the Hulbert Militia was, in a trunk that contained other Revolutionary War memorabilia. The Second Continental Congress didn't even pass a resolution that the American flag should be like the American flag we know come into use before 1840. There were already thirty states in the Union by 1840. This flag was a fake, a copy of a thirteen star flag from a period of almost a hundred years before.

Now the Hulbert Flag was just a curiosity, something that never did figure in the history of the country.

(There has never been any record of Betsy Ross sewing a flag. She was only reported to have sewn one about a hundred years later by her grandson, who lived in Baltimore and who wanted to charge

South O' the Highway (and North, too)

Countless East End summer residents have made incredible contributions in various fields. Just before 1999 rolled over into 2000, Time had on its cover its "Man of the Century," Albert Einstein, who, at the end of the 1930's, spent three summers in Peconic on the North Fork. Einstein's Theory of Relativity totally transformed our notions of space and time. It was during that last summer in Peconic in 1939 that Einstein signed a letter to President Franklin D. Roosevelt that eventually initiated the Manhattan Project.

Where Every Job Is A Recommendation

We do more because we can.

There are some real simple principles when it comes to real estate. Like, the more clout you have, the better the deal you can make. That's why The Manhattan Mortgage Company can do more for you than virtually any other mortgage source.

We originate more mortgages than anyone.* This means we can get the best rates and often a deal no one else can leverage because the mortgage sources want our business. We don't believe any one any where can do more, or jump through more hoops for you.

The Manhattan Mortgage Company. We do more because we can.

of today until 1777. Hulbert's Militia was mustered in March of 1775. What is known about the Militia from diaries and journals of the time is that it consisted of several hundred men and was ordered by General Phillip Schuyler to join the Third New York Regiment and march up the Hudson to Ticonderoga. There the Bridgehampton Militia waited upon the outcome of the Battle of Fort Ticonderoga where the revolutionaries under Colonel Ethan Allen had engineered a surprise attack on the British regulars, chasing them northward toward Quebec.

Discussions followed on whether they should attempt to capture Quebec, but since there were a lot more British redcoats than there were Colonials and since the element of surprise had passed, it was thought better to withdraw.

A number of British redcoats who had been taken prisoner were then handed over to the Bridgehampton Militia, who were ordered to escort them south to Connecticut. The regular British soldiers would be incarcerated there, and the officers taken further south still to Trenton, New Jersey. There is a report of Captain John Hulbert crossing the Delaware to go to Philadelphia and the Continental Congress, but there is no record of him taking the flag or any other of his Militiamen with him.

It's hard to imagine, but for nearly three years the Colonials fought their revolution against the British without any common identifying flag. The Sons of Liberty met in New York in 1774 to protest the stamp tax and flew a flag of thirteen red and white stripes with a rattlesnake on it. In April, 1775, the Colonials fought at Lexington and Concord under a red flag that had a chain mail arm with a sword in its fist. And at Cambridge the Colonials raised a red flag with a green pine tree on it.

Two months later in June of 1775, the Continental Congress dispatched General Washington from Philadelphia to Boston to take command of the army. He was escorted by the Philadelphia Lighthorse Troop, which had a yellow flag with a coat of arms on it, thirteen white knots and the motto, "For these we strive."

In February of 1776, the Continental Congress gave the South Carolina Provincial Congress a flag to be used by the Commander-In-Chief of the American Navy in Charleston. It was a yellow flag with a rattlesnake about to strike with the words, "Don't tread on me," underneath.

It wasn't until June 14, 1777, nearly a year after the Declaration of Independence, that the Second Continental Congress in Philadelphia adopted what we know as the Stars and Stripes. By that time George Washington and his men had been defeated in the battle of Long Island, had fled across the Hudson River to Morristown, across the Delaware into Pennsylvania, and then re-crossed it to Trenton to defeat 1400 Hessians. The following year Lord Cornwallis surrendered to him in Princeton. After that, Washington made repeated requests to get copies of the flag sent to him and his men. But none arrived until 1783, well after the war was over.

People Drive Aimlessly About As Bridge Under Repair Sinks Into The Muck

By Dan Rattiner

When the Department of Transportation examined the Sag Harbor-North Haven Bridge three years ago and came to the conclusion that it would have to soon be torn down because it was no longer safe, a howl of protest went up. The old bridge was an historical treasure for the town, a historic monument.

That people could think this sort of thing was a stretch of the imagination. The bridge was built during a particularly painful time in our history, the Great Depression, when about sixty-five percent of the country was out of work. Here on the East End, those standing around with nothing to do were put on this WPA construction project to make a concrete bridge to replace a wooden bridge that had been there before that.

On the other hand the current desire to save the bridge is heartfelt. The bridge indeed is a classic example of a WPA project. It is a very familiar sight to everyone. It has been the subject of numerous paintings and photographs.

"Fix the bridge!" the people shouted.

The DOT said they couldn't fix the bridge, but what they would do, instead of building a new and different looking modern bridge alongside,

(then tearing the old one down), would be to dismantle the old one piecemeal, first the southbound lane, then the northbound lane and on the exact same site build a new bridge that looked the people wanted, and the DOT was anxious to please.

The project began in September, 1999 and with a scheduled completion date it would be open for business on Memorial Day, 2001. The people in town would be inconvenienced, but during the construction, there would never be a time when the bridge would be shut entirely. They would use flagmen to alternate traffic on the one existing lane every five minutes. At least that was the plan.

It hasn't quite worked that way.

The first sign of trouble came when the DOT ordered signs put up on Montauk Highway alerting people to the fact that the bridge would be under construction. There are two ways to get to the bridge from the Montauk Highway, one from Bridgehampton-Sag Harbor Turnpike, and another from East Hampton along Route 114. If you are from New York, you make a left at the Bridgehampton-Sag Harbor Turnpike; if you are coming from Montauk, you make a right onto Route 114 in East Hampton. In either case, you go about seven miles until you come into the Main Street of Sag Harbor. From Main Street you cross over the bridge to North very much like the old. It wouldn't be so bad after all.

This, of course, is a lot more expensive than building a new bridge alongside an old one and then tearing the old one down, but it was what Haven.

One might have thought that the DOT would have put up signs reading WARNING, DELAYS AT THE SAG HARBOR NORTH HAVEN BRIDGE.

Instead what they did was put a series of signs on Montauk Highway that read DETOUR TO SAG HARBOR. The arrows showing the detour for people coming out from New York directed them not only past the Bridgehampton turn, but even past the Sag Harbor turn in East Hampton. For all I know, there are people from New York who are all the way through Amagansett through Montauk, staring at the Montauk Lighthouse, wondering where it is they are supposed to turn to Sag Harbor.

Going the other way there are more detour signs. And they send those looking for Sag Harbor down the Montauk Highway to New York City. How this made any sense in relation to the reconstruction of the Sag Harbor-New Haven bridge is a mystery to me.

In any case, with these bizarre signs in place, construction began on time and continued without problems for fifty-eight days at which point a crane lifting a fifty-seven ton section of the old bridge up and away collapsed and sprawled across the bridge, shutting down traffic entirely for two weeks.

Then the bridge reopened – for 121 days – until last week, when it was closed again. This time it may not reopen for more than six months.

What happened was that on the third of January workmen sinking a steel piling for the new bridge drove it into the mud of the harbor seventy-five feet and noticed that the piling and roadbed of the old bridge seemed to shiver. Work was halted and measurements taken of the remaining lane of the old bridge. It had shifted three inches. If year. I don't know if they have considered calling in the military, but it was not so long ago that the Army Corps of Engineers was putting pontoon bridges across the Rhine, suitable for half tracks, troop carriers and tanks. They could do this in eight hours.

In the meantime, people are assessing the impact that the closing of the bridge will have. North Haven isn't entirely cut off from the mainland. One can get off at the North Haven Peninsula about a ninety degree angle from the bridge by taking the Long Beach Causeway, which brings people to the commercial district of Noyac rather than the commercial district of Sag Harbor. So it can fairly be expected that over the winter the Noyac merchants will thrive – there are probably about ten stores there altogether – while the hundred or so stores in Sag Harbor will notice a slight decline. Of course if summer comes and the situation has not been solved, there might be chaos, gridlock and road rage on Main Street, Sag Harbor because people racing to get to South Ferry, which goes from North Haven to Shelter Island, will not have realized the bridge is closed because the signs the bridge had been heading toward being unsafe when the DOT studied it two years ago, there was no doubt now it was unsafe.

What happens next is anyone's guess. The engineers should meet this week to have at least one lane of the bridge – maybe a wooden temporary structure – open before the Fourth of July of this

Scandal At The Grey Lady

What Did The Editors Of The Times Know And When Did They Know It?

By Dan Rattiner

This year is the 40th anniversary of the founding of Dan's Papers. I know that because the first edition of the paper, copies of which I still have, appeared on July 1, 1960. Coming up is July 1, 2000. 2000 minus 1960 is forty.

I also know this because the volume number this past year was thirty-nine. Every year I change the volume number and then I write the issue number that relates to that year, so that the fourth edition of last year's paper was referred as Volume 39, Number 4.

Newspapers, particularly the older ones, take great pride in their issue numbers. They actually count from the first edition they ever published and just proceed numerically onward, so that every single issue has its own individual number. The New York Times, for instance, last December 28, published issue 51,750. Careful readers might have noticed however that the issue of January 1, 2000, just four days after December 28, was almost 500 numbers lower than before.

An explanation of this might be in order – and in fact the Times provided one, buried on page twenty-two.

An error had been discovered by a twenty-four year-old news assistant named Aaron Donovan. His job is, among other things, is to change that number on the front page every day to make sure it is one number higher than it had been the day before. He took his job very seriously, writing, the following memo to his superiors:

"There is something that appeals to me about the way the issue number marks the passage of time across decades and centuries. It has been steadily climbing for longer than anyone who has ever glanced at it has been alive. The 19th century newsboy hawking papers in a snowy Union Square is in some minute way bound by the issue number to the Seattle advertising executive reading the paper with her feet propped up on a desk."

The error was discovered by a twenty-four year old news assistant named Aaron Donovan.

His editors told him that if he wanted as an assignment to look further into the numbering sequence of the Times, it was all right with them.

Donovan then did research – the first edition of the paper was on September 18, 1851 – and reported back that something terrible had happened on the evening of February 7, 1898, when the editors were changing the issue number. The day before the issue number had been 14,499. They decided, quite by error, that the edition the next day would be 15,000. They had skipped 500

And that's why, on December 31, 1999, the Times' numbers were 500 higher than they were on the morning of the Millennium. On January 1, the issue might have said 51,754; instead it said 51,254.

There are two things about this that bother me. The first is: which Times' editors knew about this and when did they know about it? If they knew about it from Mr. Donovan in November, for instance, and they decided to hold up on reporting the story until January 1, they knowingly caused the paper to print a lie every morning for more than a month. This is something a major daily newspaper is not supposed to do, even if their goal is to bury the error on page twenty-two when they know there will be a major news feature (Y2K) on the front page – the turn of the Millennium – of such vast magnitude readers might not notice the correction.

Of course this reader noticed. And Aaron Donovan, still wet behind the ears, noticed.

It is possible I am being unfair to the Times. Maybe the error came to light only on New Year's Eve and as soon as the editors got the story they ran it. Well, there's a clue. In the article correcting the error, the editors write, "the error came to light recently."

"Recently" sounds like November, or even earlier.

Another problem is that the Times held their big celebration back in 1995 for the arrival of number 50,000. The party, which was reported on the front page of the paper that March 14, was attended by many dignitaries and celebrities of the city. Because of the error they should not have been there that day. They should have showed up about a year and a third later, on July 26, 1996.

A still further problem in all of this, and it is not even addressed in the article correcting the error, is the fact that clearly, for the next 500 days, there will be two editions of the paper with the same issue number on it. There will be the one for the current day, and then there will be the one for the issue 500 days earlier, when it bore the same issue number.

One might have thought they'd call January 1, 2000 issue 51,254* – or 51,254b, but they don't. This dual numbering of different issues is an invitation to confusion.

I think there needs to be some sort of punishment for this underhanded, sleazy and in the end stupid behavior on the part of these journalists who, because of their station at The New York Times, pride themselves on their ethics and brilliance. I think all the Pulitzer Prizes awarded to the New York Times during these past 500 days should be rescinded. And I think the editor who made the decision to hold off on the story until it could be snuck through under the radar of Y2K should be required to go back into the old editions and, one by one, put an asterisk on them. Any old editions that turn up in the future should be given to this man so he could add an asterisk to the issue number as well.

As for Dan's Papers, I have a confession to make. If you count all the volume numbers of my paper, from 1960 to the year 2000, and you count them with 1960 being Volume I, which it was, you will discover that our 40th anniversary, which would coincide with our 40th volume number, would be in 1999. Somewhere, over the last forty years, our volume number must have repeated itself to create the illusion that July 1, 2000 is volume 40 instead of Volume 41.

I'm going to lace up my boots, put on my hunting jacket and my pith helmet and head into the attic where we keep all the back issues. I intend to find out when we made this mistake and when I find out I'll report on it the very next issue. If I'm not out in three days, however, call the cops.

Junior Kroll's grandfather was meeting a friend.
A Russian officer he hadn't seen since the end
Of World War Two. His eyes filled with tears,
Embracing the man after so many years.
His granddaughter Tamara was there as well.
They met in the lobby of the Cosmos Hotel.
Junior and Tamara, born two months apart,
Knew they'd be friends right from the start.
Tamara spoke English. She taught Junior to speak
Quite a bit of Russian in less than a week.
Anton made them welcome in a place that was strange.
Moscow was a city in the midst of great change.
They viewed the Kremlin and strolled Red Square,
Gorky Park and what could compare
To the Moscow Circus, the Bolshoi Ballet.
They explored the museums and galleries each day
And stopped to shop along the famous Arbat.
Where Tamara helped Junior select a fur hat
Which he refused to remove. They all agreed
He looked like a man destined to succeed.
They listened as Anton lit a cigar
And told them his dream of owning a car.
Life wasn't easy but Anton explained
That freedom was precious though problems remained.
Junior and Tamara each promised to write.
Anton raised his glass in a toast that last night.
Za Mir; to peace was all he said.
Grandfather smiled and nodded his head.

Sag Harbor Village Officials Speak And The Leaders Of The World Tremble

By Dan Rattiner

Sag Harbor Village has once again thrust itself onto the stage of international affairs. The last time it did this was during the administration of Mayor Edward Butts, who, bored with having to deal with such things as skateboards, beach stickers and police salaries – the ordinary sort of mundane things that villages are supposed to attend to at their weekly board meetings – began to look at the larger picture. For instance, that year after discussing whether or not to allow one hour or two hour parking on Long Wharf, the mayor and his board turned their attentions to Soviet Premier Mikhail Gorbachev. Gorbachev had agreed to hold a high level meeting in Iceland with President Ronald Reagan to discuss disarmament. After the meeting, leaders from around the world rose to praise the two men. Margaret Thatcher, the Prime Minister of Britain praised the outcome. So did F.W. de Klerk, the President of South Africa and Helmut Kohl the Chancellor of West Germany. Also wading in was Mayor Butts of Sag Harbor, who declared that Premier Gorbachev should be complimented for his courage in bringing the Soviet Union to the table, and Sag Harbor Village for one, was all in favor of it. An official letter of commendation was sent to Gorbachev.

Sag Harbor Village, as I recall, also passed a decree denouncing the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait. Two years later, they joined with the UN Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Gali in denouncing Serbia for its attack on Croatia.

Potholes may have been forming on Bay Street but there wasn't a world leader who didn't think twice before saying something that might offend the Village of Sag Harbor, at least so the village thought.

This period of thrusting itself on the international stage lasted for two years back in 1989 and 1990. Now Sag Harbor is doing it again. Last Tuesday, the Village Board unanimously voted in a new law declaring the village to be a nuclear free community. Prohibited within Sag Harbor radio active material through the village for the attempted blowing up, say, of the tourist windmill on Long Wharf. That ought to discourage them.

This puts me in mind for another sign that stood for a long time on the Sag Harbor Turnpike. It was a big sign that said, "Welcome to Sag Harbor." Hooks were under it and in the summer, another sign was put there reading "Museum Open." In the winter, Museum Open was removed and the sign "Closed for the Winter" put in its place, so that from November to April the sign read, "Welcome to Sag Harbor. Closed for the Winter."

This puts me in mind for another sign that stood for a long time on the Sag Harbor Turnpike. It was a sign that said "Welcome to Sag Harbor."

Village limits are the design, deployment, construction, launching, maintenance and storage of nuclear weapons. In case the scheming terrorists don't read the Sag Harbor ordinance book, the village also voted to erect signs at the entrances to the village at Long Beach, the Sag Harbor-Bridgehampton Turnpike and Hampton Road, declaring Sag Harbor to be a nuclear free community. Terrorists or anybody else will be required to officially notify the village ninety-six hours in advance if they intend to transport any

Another deterrence for terrorists. I think the Village Board should be commended for this new Ordinance Number One for the year 2000. We will issue them a proclamation from Dan's Papers. A lot of thought went into the part of the ordinance that prevents the deployment of nuclear weapons within the village. Whether they plan to have those pre-existing Scud missiles removed from the top of Mount Misery, I don't know. Maybe they'll be grandfathered in, but for sure they're going to have to halt the construction of those intercontinental ballistic missile silos up back of Pierson High School.

There's another Village Board meeting next Tuesday. I understand there's something on the table about the Immigration Department's decision to return that six year old boy to Cuba. We'll just have to wait to see.

on Montauk Highway only tell them there is no way to get to Sag Harbor.

Another problem for North Haven is that they do not have a Fire Department. There are only about 600 residents in North Haven and the community is served by the Otter House Company in Sag Harbor, which now has to take a five mile detour over to Noyac and the Long Beach Causeway to get to any problem there. There is talk about putting a fire truck in North Haven for the winter, but there is no garage there big enough to accommodate it and even if there were, there are not enough able bodied men in North Haven to man it; they have to wait for help from Sag Harbor anyway.

I went over to Sag Harbor to look at the bridge the other day and of course I couldn't get close to it. There are enough highway cones and big flashing lights and signs to keep anyone away. They don't even want people walking on the bridge. Unsafe is unsafe.

When I got home to East Hampton, I happened to notice a photograph in the November issue of National Geographic. It was of a brand new bridge that had been built in Honduras and had its ribbon cutting just two years ago. At the time the bridge crossed the Choluteca River, linking two bustling towns that until that time had no way of bringing goods and materials by truck from one to the other. The photograph was an aerial view of the bridge taken just two months ago which was about a year after Hurricane Mitch had come through which, among other things had altered the course of the Choluteca River. The new bridge now crosses land and the river rages around it to the south.

There is a lesson here. No matter how bad you think things are, it is always worse somewhere else.

RHIC

Pondering "Big Science" At Brookhaven Lab's Relativistic Heavy Ion Collider

By Jerry Cimisi

When first presented with part of the 3.8 kilometre ring of the Relativistic Heavy Ion Collider (RHIC) at Brookhaven National Laboratory, I thought of the pyramids.

Of course, this was an analogy more figurative than literal. The pyramids were places of ornate burial for the royal dead, the "City of the West" that would bring the body past earthly time. While the RHIC would be attempting to recreate the very nature of the Universe immediately after the Creation itself: to duplicate the temperature and states of matter in the instants following the Big Bang.

Big, apparently, was the word. "This is probably the biggest nuclear physics project attempted to date," said Tim Hallman, a physicist and one of the directors of the work that will be done at RHIC.

Indeed, standing in the huge, hangar type room (I guessed the ceiling was about a hundred feet high) that housed STAR, one of the four experimental stations along the ring, one definitely had a pyramid type perspective.

I have to note that my first "experience" with RHIC was merely and literally a bump in the road. As I was being driven by Lab spokesperson Mona Rowe to the RHIC complex through the campus of BNL, she said, "This bump we're going over is part of the ring."

Then I was in front of this metal, wire laced instrument which BNL literature described as barrel shaped and Tim Hallman, a physicist for the project, was telling me STAR stood for Solenoidal Tracker at RHIC. Solenoidal is the shape of the longitudinal magnetic field in which two opposing beams of gold ions, travelling nearly at the speed of light, will collide and produce, scientists hope, a snapshot of the very early universe. Hallman, who had once intended to be a musician, had the friendly manner of the perfect science teacher (in that he was absolutely in love with his subject and he believed he would make you understand it) was my primary guide through the intricacies of the project.

In the center of the STAR apparatus was the Time Projection Chamber, a name that conjured up science fictional possibilities. Of course, one realized that RHIC's very appellation began with the term "Relativistic" – in other words, bound with the nature of space and time.

In fact, the time scale the STAR project is working with is extremely microscopic. "Ten to the minus twenty-three seconds," said Hallman is when the camera takes its "snapshot" after the particle collision. That is a decimal point followed by twenty-two zeros and then a one.

Hallman told me that the Time Projection Chamber is a digital camera that will record the shower of subatomic particles resulting from the collision of gold ions. The chamber is filled with argon-methane gas and lined with 137,000 copper pads. The collisions of gold ions produce subatomic particles that are very short-lived, but they hit atoms in the gas and knock off electrons, which "drift" to the copper pads; this is what is recorded by the digital camera. Just as the colors of the spectrum of a burning substance reveal the element and a person is in that for hours."

Most of the STAR apparatus is metal forged in France and was machined in Canada. "That outer ring," said Hallman, is so big they had to shut down the George Washington Bridge to bring it out here. It just barely fit through the toll by inches."

At the very heart of STAR is a beryllium pipe – which, at this moment, was almost entirely covered in a thick layer of, incongruously, bubble wrap. It was in this pipe that the gold ions would collide. The pipe is extremely thin, said Hallman, its wall is about one millimetre thick and very brittle; hence, in this moment of being exposed, the bubble wrap.

Surrounding the Time Projection Chamber is a calorimeter, which detects particles – such as photons – that cannot be measured in the chamber. It is made up of alternating layers (twenty-three each) of lead and a special plastic, polystyrene scintillator. The atoms of this plastic are of such a nature that its atoms are easily excited and then emit photons at a wavelength readily detected by a photoelectric device.

"You could think of a calorimeter like a soup can, with sixty square metres of surface area. It's divided into sub-units – called towers – so we can better isolate the response of single particles."

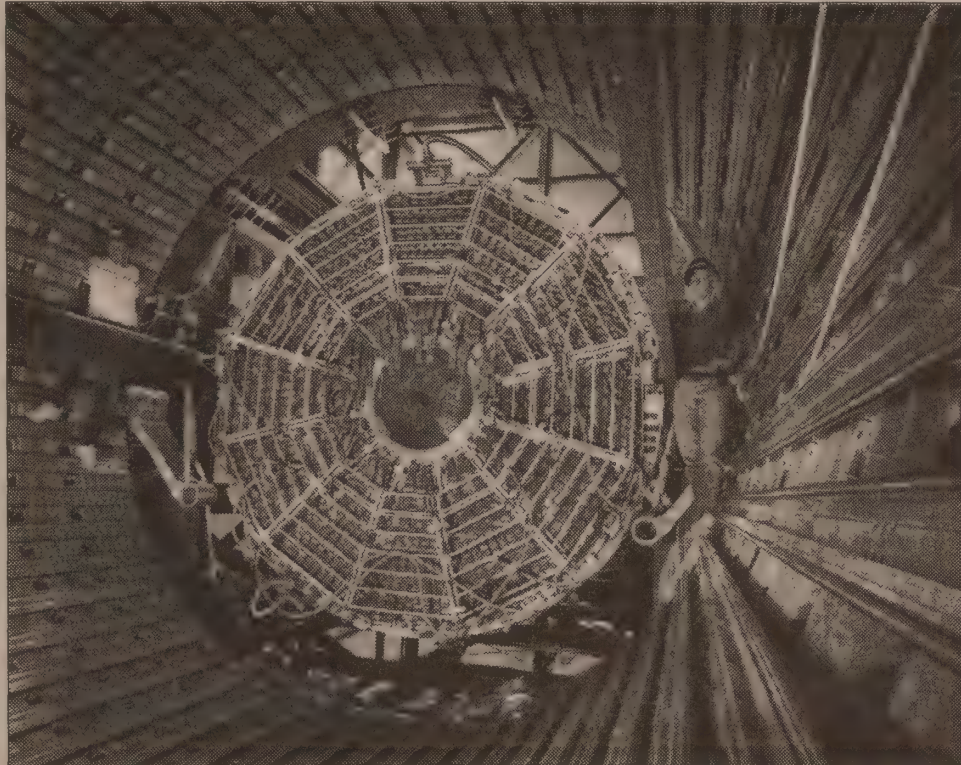

Between the Time Projection Chamber and the calorimeter is another section of scintillator that is the trigger for the digital camera. Because of the extremely short time scales involved, analysis of the particle collisions is not like taking a picture with a camera and then looking at the film after it is developed. "The Time Projection Chamber has a memory, and keeps an event for us to look at it." What the scientists are studying is a computer mapping of the event.

The collisions noted by the scintillator helps researchers choose when to turn on the camera. "We know that the collisions that will produce the most particles are head on collisions," said Hallman. "Otherwise we would have to turn it on 10,000 times a second."

There is the problem of cosmic rays, which bombard the earth at all times and easily penetrate the thickest shielding. "When we have an event," said Hallman, "the question is, did all the scintillators – react, or just a few, which would indicate a cosmic ray."

All this is undertaken with a software that took 200 man-years to develop, said Hallman, a software built from scratch. "This whole project," he said, "was built on a green field. We're pushing or elements in that substance, each subatomic particle travelling at a given speed, knocks off a characteristic number of electrons.

Why are gold atoms used? "We want an atom with a large nucleus."

There is also the matter of stability. For the purpose of the project it is better to work with a more stable element. Gold has seventy-nine protons and 118 neutrons. The more even the ratio between protons and neutrons in an element, the more stable the element.

The STAR apparatus was roped off with a sign warning that a magnetic field of 5,000 gauss was in operation. "That's about a half Tesla," said Hallman. "If you have any credit cards they can ruin the magnet strip."

Being credit cardless, that wasn't a worry, but there was the natural question as to the health effects of being in proximity to a high magnetic field. Hallman explained it decreased rapidly with distance. "Where we are standing there's really no effect. But even in the field it shouldn't be a problem."

Mona Rowe said, "An MRI is about four Tesla, the envelope. For the entire RHIC project we will be generating ten to the fifteenth petabytes per year. We're taking computing into a whole new realm itself."

This plethora of information will be accessible at computer terminals throughout the world. The number of scientists involved in the various experiments at RHIC is large. About twenty countries are collaborating in the RHIC project, and about a total of one thousand scientists are involved.

The gold ions that are essential to RHIC go through a journey even before they pass through the 3.8 kilometre ring. At Brookhaven Lab's Tandem Van de Graaff Accelerator a thin pellet of gold is bombarded by ions. The gold atoms pop up from the pellet and are collected by an electric field which accelerates the atoms. "The gold atoms become stripped of electrons," said Hallman, "and this causes them to move faster in an electric field."

The atoms then travel to another accelerator, called the Booster, where they are speeded up further and then to the Alternating Gradient Synchrotron which strips more electrons from the atoms. By the time the atoms reach RHIC they are totally stripped of electrons and travelling at near (99.7%) light speed – and carrying, when they collide, 40 tera electron volts of energy – that's 40 times ten to the thirteenth. ("Tera" is two steps up from "mega," and a step up from "giga.")

"On the atomic scale," said Hallman, that's a lot of energy; on our scale, no."

The amount of gold used in RHIC is extremely minute: "Your average wedding band has enough gold to supply RHIC for a billion years," he added.

The next stop was the PHENIX project. (PHENIX is the acronym for Pioneering High Energy Nuclear Interaction Experiment.) There were two squat cone shaped magnets, one from Russia and one from Japan, I was told by Achim Franz, a physicist at the project. Apparently, the Department of Energy had gotten a very good deal on the metal from Russia just after the breakup of the Soviet Union. These two magnets will create a toroidal field; a third magnet in the center of PHENIX will create an axial field.

Again, one was impressed by the size of the apparatus, which weighs 3,000 tons. PHENIX is designed to especially measure a class of particles called leptons, which interact in matter primarily the electro-magnetic force whereas STAR measures hadrons, that interact with what is called the strong force.

PHENIX is located in another huge hangar-like space. One part of the apparatus was at one end of the building: a huge curved carriage of wires and metal that will fit over the interior where the magnets will be focused.

On either side of the magnets were walls of steel plates. One of the particles PHENIX is particularly interested in are muons, which will pass through the steel; particles such as hadrons will be stopped by the steel. So what comes out on the other side of the wall will be muons. There were blocks of steel reinforced concrete that will make up a "door" that will shield PHENIX when in operation.

In a room off to the side were several people at computer terminals. In another room, on a white blackboard, Franz and Hallman tried to explain to me (and I think, after a time, I grasped it), the basics concerning the spin of the proton, another one of the subatomic mysteries that RHIC is exploring. The spin of each proton (or, you could say, its angular momentum) should be the sum total of the spins of the various particles that comprise the proton. I ventured the possibility that perhaps RHIC might come across a hitherto unknown particle that would have to be factored into the sum total of the proton spin.

"Then we'll all get Nobel Prizes," said Hallman.

Finally, Mona Rowe and Hallman took me into the tunnel itself. One wasn't actually within the two pipes that would carry the opposing beams of gold ions, but in the curving tunnel that housed the pipes, which are cooled by liquid helium to the unnatural frigid temperature of four degrees Kelvin (the Kelvin scale begins at absolute zero) in order to make the interior of the magnets superconducting. "If we didn't do this," said Hallman, "the ring of RHIC would have to be so large we might not be able to fit it on Long Island."

Access to the tunnel was not easy. We were confronted by two security guards. Hallman then took out a card and ran it through a machine. Inside the tunnel we walked until we reached a section where the pipes were closer together, then closer still, then reached STAR where the beams intersect and cross over each other.

PHENIX and STAR are two of the four experiments that will be in operation when the Relativistic Heavy Ion Collider goes on line. There are two other places along the ring where the beams cross and which will be used for future experiments. When RHIC does ply its beam, a group of scientists somewhere on the premises of Brookhaven National Laboratory will be directing, via computer, the thin beams of ions so they collide. The entire RHIC project balances, almost surreally, the large and the minute.

"You have to say this is really Big Science," Mona Rowe remarked as we left and watched, in the dusk, four deer emerge from around the distant curve of RHIC's perimeter and race into the woods.

RHIC, humankind's attempt to recreate – in a small way, of course – the very Creation, should be starting up in a few months. "It's a long commitment for the people who work here," said Hallman. "A decade or two of your life. A lot of people might think what we are trying to do will have nothing to do with the average person's life, but I guarantee that dozens of times today you have used technology – cell phones, microwaves – that are a direct result of research that science did forty and fifty years ago. I think what we do here will result in some very cool stuff." •

Our Crack Reporter Tries To Rent A Room In Her Bridgehampton Home

By Joan Zandell

I never thought that in mid-life that I would find myself on a quest for the ideal housemate. In my mind's eye, I had anticipated children, a husband, dogs, cats and horses, a home and cars and all the mundane things that go with that life. But instead, I seem to be collecting people. It has led me down a path I never dreamt possible.

If you've ever rented out a room in your home, you know how unsettling it can be. You really never know whom it is you are getting. We tend to put our best foot forward initially until the formality of the relationship wears off, and then one fateful morning you wake up to the absolute reality of an other human being sharing your every inch of space. It is totally unlike living with a mate or a lover; because there is none of the romance and the intimacy, yet there they are eating off your best china, tracking mud across your oriental carpets and putting the wrong utensils in the dishwasher.

Now I don't consider myself to be an overly trusting person, but it would seem that my word is worth more than most people's signed documents, which not only goes unappreciated but is considered an old-fashioned and even stupidly naive way of doing business. I don't perceive myself as a landlord and I don't like the idea of being legally bound to someone I don't care for by a lease agreement when they or I have decided they would rather live somewhere else. Ultimately people get hostile and act badly if they've decided that you are the reason that they are unhappy. But then again, some act badly just as a matter of course.

The first housemate I ever had was an old friend from New York, who, in the throes of February, had phoned me to ask would I consider renting her a room in my home for the summer? The truth was, I hadn't considered it and needed time to think about it. I weighed the pros and cons and decided to see where the experience took me.

She came without a car and she planned to remain that way for the duration of the summer. She informed me that she would include me in her weekend plans if I would do the driving. When I recovered from the impudence of her assumption, I felt compelled to enlighten her that being her private chauffeur was not included in the price of the room, that I'd be happy to accompany her occasionally but that I had my own plans.

What was all this socializing about?

She was in a desperate search for Mr. Right. And she was certain that this was the place and the time in which to find him. I was exhausted from simply watching her.

On the day of the Writer's and Artist's Game that we had planned to attend together, I had a flat tire. Well, don't you know, she hopped in a cab so fast it would make your head spin, leaving me there to deal with the flat and AAA on my own. Later when I saw her at the game, she flew by me as if I were invisible, on an errand for one of the stars of the game. You would never have believed that we'd been friends for fifteen years.

The following year she returned with a close friend and two bicycles. The friend clearly had never been housetrained. Although she only appeared every other weekend, her presence was felt like a dark thundercloud hanging over my home. She was blond and brooding, judgemental and perpetually angry unless she was basking in the glow of her recently acquired endorphins due to her necessary, daily ten-mile run. Afterwards, she'd take her hot, dirty, sweaty, unwashed body and place it in one of the only two white silk chairs in the house to relax. Her idea of the perfect day was to run ten miles, then come home and sit her filthy body in a white silk chair and watch herself on TV. Despite the fact that she was a guest in my home she treated me like the hired help who also happened to be a dreadful inconvenience and a constant reminder that she was ten years, and that this process consumed her life. She would lose the house keys and come home at 3 o'clock in the morning drunk and screaming to be let in.

Then one morning I found her sitting in her babydoll pajamas at my dining room table, a glass of vodka next to her laptop, papers spread out everywhere, working furiously on the next leg of her obsession. I asked her how much money she had spent on her divorce to date. She claimed $250,000. I suggested perhaps if she had invested that money in the stock market over the last ten years, imagine how wealthy she'd be, instead of pouring it into the pockets of her attorneys. The remark went supposedly unnoticed, she was, after all in the thick of her frenzy. She was gonna get him this time.

Suddenly things began to disappear. First there was my wallet which I'd kept in the glove compartment of my car. Then a ring my mother had made for me when I was born disappeared from its place beside my bed. I had only started to wear it again recently; it was an unusual ring and it was an heirloom. I lose umbrellas with regularity, but I have never lost a piece of valuable jewelry. When I reported its disappearance to the police, the obsessive compulsive in the babydoll pajamas refused to come out of her room to speak with them, despite the fact that she was the only person in the house at the time of its disappearance. After they left, she suddenly had to return to New York in a hurry, there was an emergency. Once gone, I promised myself she would be the last.

But living alone simply isn't my style. I like people. And since I am neither married nor have I fallen deeply in love in quite some time, knowing that there is a caring human being sharing your home has a certain degree of comfort. I decided to place another ad. This time I'd look for a year 'rounder.

Within weeks, I had two possible candidates to chose from, both males, both with good references. They worked for a living, had no drug or alcohol problems that their references would attest to and basically seemed decent. One wanted a year round arrangement, whereas the other was building his own home and looking for a room until it was completed. I chose the latter. We agreed on November 15 to May 1.

In time I discovered he had decided to leave his live-in girlfriend of one year because at the ripe old age of forty-four he was determined to marry and have a family. And the girlfriend he had been living with and had recently left is fifty years old, (although he made a special point to mention that she is very attractive and looks thirty-five because she works out a lot). Though she may be great in the sack, she cannot reproduce the species and therefore is disposable. Now he knew this going in, but it didn't stop him only renting a room.

Suddenly things began to disappear. First there was my wallet... then a ring my mother had made me when I was born...

The following summer I placed an ad in the local papers. A trail of strangers responded. Finally a divorced New Yorker who claimed to be a former homeowner in Bridgehampton appeared. We had mutual acquaintances. That made her almost not a stranger. She seemed nice enough and was charming in a sort of ditzzy way.

In time, I learned that she would start to drink early in the day, that she really wasn't divorced but had been in the process of divorce for a mere from living with her. So out with the old and in with the new. After a year of connubial bliss he moves into my house on a week's notice. He claims to be shattered.

His first night as my tenant we go to dinner to get to know one another better. He treats. The next night, he is bedridden with a cold, so I offer chicken soup. I feel perhaps he's an ok guy even if his behavior towards the ex-girlfriend seems opportunistic. Judge not, etc...

Well, within days I notice he isn't around much in the evenings. Then he announces it's so hard to break up "cold turkey" right before Thanksgiving. But if I know any females in their thirties who are marriageable, that he'd love to meet them.

I inform him that I draw the line at procuring for my tenants. Secretly I begin to feel that he's an a-hole, but I keep the news to myself. And yet some unexplained something is gnawing at me and begins to wake me up in the middle of the night in a panic. The voice says, "Good God, Joan, wake up! You've got a misogynist living under the same roof with you! Perhaps he'll mistake you for a doormat!" Unfortunately, my instincts are rarely wrong.

Next, I notice that he is spending a lot of time at the fifty year-old-ex-girlfriend's house. Then on the first of the month, the day that the rent is due, two weeks after first moving in, he announces that he is moving out. He'd rather live with the guys where it's cheaper and he'll feel freer to belch and scratch and leave the toilet seat up. No "Sorry, I know we had a deal, but this isn't working for me." which would not have made me happy but would have been something I could relate to. No, "I hope this hasn't inconvenienced you Joan in any way, I'll stay until you find someone else," nothing, nada, gurnicht.

B-bye. Two weeks. Tough s—t.

When I suggested that he was breaking our agreement and it was two weeks before Christmas and I had turned away a year 'rounder in favor of him, he said, "You should consider having something in writing in the future if you want to be protected."

The thought of tracking him through the legal system left me cold.

I responded, "I appreciate the advice, but we still had an agreement, and you broke that agreement."

His eyes shot little daggers at me as he snorted, "I don't think so."

Angrily, I asked myself as I stood there looking at this hostile, short man in my home, sitting on

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Observations of a New Islander #88

New Year, New Snoopy

Can you believe it? The year we all heard of in grade school and throughout our adult lives is here...2000.

The morning of New Year's Eve, I got a frantic 1011 (Ten-One-One) phone call from my buddy Bev Walz. Her sewing machine broke and she needed a DKNY leotard altered in time for New Year's Eve. Now, needing an alteration for a New Year's Eve party dress is a 1011 emergency call. 911 is merely for life or death emergencies, 1011 is reserved for fashion emergencies, often a case of life or breast.

Bev brought the leotard over and showed me the chalk line she wanted it lowered to. It was going under this gorgeous beaded sheer flapper style dress. I suggested her husband, Barry the brilliant carpenter, might like it better without a leotard underneath. But Bev declined my idea, saying she'd rather make it to the party. I held up this tiny leotard, which would have fit me when I was four, and eyed the delicate task at hand. Bev took off, I knew it was too difficult for her to watch me cut a Donna Karan anything.

I made the cut and proceeded to start to serge the edge when suddenly my machine jammed and would not surrender its grip on the fabric. I twisted and worked the wheel every way I could. I turned the machine to face Mecca. I cursed as loud as I could and threatened it. Nothing. My Singer looked at me the way that the shark looked at Roy Scheider in Jaws as it clenched Quint's body in its mouth. My machine had that same mocking sneer as it held its Donna Karan prize with a death grip. Finally I was able to cut around it and free the leotard. I proceeded to sew the item by hand. She was a friend in need, and like my Uncle Walter always said, "A friend in need, is a pest." In the van, I took the traumatized leotard over to Bev. She was in the middle of another lighting project. Remember her wonderful Snoopy Halloween house? Well, she was at it again. This time she was going to have Snoopy laying on the roof holding a champagne bottle while draped over the year 2000.

Poor Barry the brilliant carpenter, I bet he spends as much time wiring Bev's projects to the roof as he does taking them down. I suggested he build a little room for himself up there on the roof with a TV, chair, fridge. That way he can wait on the roof for Bev's project of the week. In January, she'll have him put up Snoopy in a nice Kente robe to celebrate Martin Luther King Day. Bev's bound to put Snoopy back up in February for Valentine's Day if she can decide where to put the heart on. After Valentines, she'll add a beard to the Snoopy for Presidents Day. In March, she'll have Barry put up a drunken Snoopy for St. Patrick's Day. Then it's Snoopy with a matzo for Passover followed shortly by Snoopy with a bunny for Easter in April. May has Mother's Day and Memorial Day. I figure Bev can kill two holidays with one stone by having Snoopy kissing his mother who will be dressed as a WAC. June has Father's Day, so Bev can add four or five hundred of Snoopy's puppies. July of course has Independence Day, so Snoopy will be holding a flag while dressed as the Statue of Liberty. August, blessed August. August has no holiday, so Barry can come down from the roof for a few weeks. But he has to go back up for Labor Day in September. I think Bev is planning to display a pregnant Snoopy for Labor Day. Of course, Halloween is still in October which will bring the Walz's full circle. After Halloween, I think Bev will dress Snoopy as a pilgrim, or a turkey for Thanksgiving, but I don't think she's planned that far ahead. December will see Snoopy as Santa naturally.

Bev gave me a plant I've admired as a thank you. Bev told me that her nickname is Sally, which is a column unto itself. But it certainly explains to me all those rumors I've heard about Barry and some tart named Sally around town. For awhile, people thought it was me. I said no, but thanked them for thinking of me just the same. The truth is, it's almost impossible to have an affair on Shelter Island. People are known by their cars and vehicles parked in strange territory are noted. My red van with its "Bada Bing" plate gets me spotted all the time. At 5 a.m. you can look outside and watch whose car is sneaking home. On Shelter Island, you must remember, love may be blind, but the neighbors ain't.

Before I left Bev's house, Barry backed me into a corner. He leaned in close and whispered in my ear, "The eighteen foot ladder is on the side of the house. I'll pay you a 100 bucks to steal the Snoopy after we leave for the party and burn it..."

MON-TALK with Ingrid Lemme

You see how happy you are to have us all back? Two weeks vacation for Dan's Papers is a whole lot for people who are used to reading great, fun, informative stuff! Isn't it? So how are your New Year's resolutions doing? You made more than one, didn't you? Mine are practically dead. Who has time for diets and exercise anyway? Lets take just a little longer advantage of the in-style Monica look.

Well, and then I had promised myself for the new Millennium no more lies, not even those little unimportant white one? Until Bob Marley became a part of my life a few months ago, to be correct the day, when teenage son took over my car. His eighteenth Birthday was on New Year's Eve, God be with us. I really don't care much for my little gray-purple Neon, because of its plenty of character defects, like the always-squeaking brakes. But it did match the color of the adorable purple silk blouse when I bought it five years ago.

Yes, I do admit that I was tired of being teenage son's personal driver, until he became mine, and the first speeding ticket flew into our mailbox. Nick had successfully installed his CD player, removed my lovely potpourri, decorated and changed Neon's appearance. But most importantly, I came to carry a little key chain picture of Bob Marley.

Bob was kind of a wild looking man; his hair was long and in dreadlocks, a big difference from the kitten's photo, which Nick had replaced with Bob's. I could only guess that Bob must be somewhere in the wide collection of CDs, which were now a daily part of my driving life. Strangely enough, whenever I pulled Bob out of my pocket book, I got a lot of attention. People reacted, first of all surprised and then, deeply impressed. I adopted Bob.

Well, I do admit that I am a hopeless Sinatra /Patsy Cline fan who is just crazy for feelings so lonely. There was a time when I pretended that I would like a certain kind of music, to impress the man who did not have a clue that I wanted to marry him. I didn't have to pretend anymore until Bob came! I didn't ask for him, he just happened. I never lied. Not really, I only smiled mischievously. That's not even a white lie, is it? Amusingly, I'd developed the habit of leaving my key chain hanging in my office door with Bob's picture dangling softly back and forth with every person passing the open door.

A real nice maintenance man, George Fuller, was doing some work in my office, he recognized Bob and showed the same impressed reaction, but more ecstatic. He declared that he was always very impressed with the kind of work I do, smart man. That he thinks, I am really different, positively different, and now he is even more impressed with my wonderful taste for real music. Tada!! What would you have done? Explain to him the whole, boring story? A male who admires you and is coincidentally a member of a younger generation? I thanked him with a gracious, perfectly astounded smile and there it was, suddenly, a few words only, but they made all the difference. "One should never assume age or taste." Was that a lie?

FIFTEEN YEARS AGO

"The Premature Launching"

January 9, 1985

Shipbuilding was a major occupation on Long Island a hundred years ago, and various sloops, barks and fishing boats were constructed in towns such as Sag Harbor, Greenport and Port Jefferson.

Back then, they knew what they were doing anyway.

More recently, one is not so sure. In Riverhead, for example, the owners of the Peconic Bay Marina last month oversaw the dismantling of a boathouse so that a large sixty-five foot catamaran, under construction inside, could be somehow gotten out of there. The catamaran had been built in such a way that it was too large to be moved out a door.

Furthermore, the catamaran was nowhere finished. After five years of weekend dabbling on the part of a New York psychiatrist who had rented the boathouse, it had become apparent to the landlords that the construction might extend on well into the next decade. Meanwhile, there were other things going on. Buildings had sprung up, docks had been built. Late this summer, the landlords decided that they'd better get the good doctor out of there if they ever wanted to use the boathouse for anything else but the building of this catamaran.

Pressure was applied, eviction notices written and served. Finally, three weeks ago, the psychiatrist began moving out. He hired a civil engineer, Victor Von Draycek, of New York and Monte Carlo, to supervise the work and Dr. Von Draycek and a crew of two came out and stayed at the Riverhead Holiday Inn for a time.

The initial decision was to save the ship and continue building it somewhere rather than tear it apart. Once this was decided, the next thing was to decide on a new shipyard. Arrangements were soon made to take the project to a shipyard in Flamouth, Massachusetts. The doctor would come out weekends to Falmouth rather than to Riverhead. An alternate idea, to take the shipshull down to Florida, proved too costly.

Early thinking also focused on the best method to make the move. At first it was thought a crane and barge would be used, but this was rejected when the cost of an extra heavy duty crane was taken into consideration. The final solution was to hire two flat lo-boy trucks, the sort that are used in moving trailers around the country. These were constructed by the Lighthouse Marine Service in Copiague.

Four weeks ago, on a Wednesday, the first of the two hulls was moved out, pictures of which are shown on these pages. The wall of the boathouse was temporarily taken down, and the hull was shoved slowly along on iron rollers on top of wooden rails as you can see. Steel cables and pulleys were also used so that the hull would not go off in some direction that it was not intended.

The job took much of the day and the crew, after arranging for the arrival of the trucks the following Saturday, proceeded to slide the second hull sideways inside the building and then also down the same rails as the first.

A crane lifted the hulls onto the two lo-boy trucks, and they were last seen heading west toward the Throgs Neck Bridge, for the long haul up toward Falmouth.

So much for shipbuilding on Long Island.

"Trumpets in the Sky – Canadian Geese in V Formation Over the Farms"

January 12, 1990

When the sky is crisp on a clear winter night, one can hear from far away the magical sound of Branta canadensis, also known to us as Canadian geese. These beautiful creatures can be seen over the Hamptons as they migrate from Canada to the mid-Atlantic states, from Massachusetts to North Carolina.

The birds can go as high as 3,000 feet when migrating, as they fly in what is known as a V formation. Some biologists believe they are born with what they call an inherited star map. It is an amazing phenomenon. Often they may migrate at night by this built-in star map, apparently using the stars as a compass, traveling back and forth to the same mating place each year, according to Steve Stanford from the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation's Stony Brook office. He added that no one quite knows how these interesting water fowl read the heavens. The oldest Canadian geese lead the gaggle through almost any kind of weather. But what is most recognizable about the overpassing Canadian geese is their tremendous honk that Indians have been known to call the "cry of freedom."

The Canadian geese's ancient mating grounds are lifetime patterns. While males are well-known for their competitive behavior, there is also some rivalry among the females, but basically, geese are monogamous. Canadian geese are known to protect each other from other geese. When a gander, the male of the species, arrives at the mating ground without a goose, a female of the species, the gander already in a monogamous couple may have to defend his lifelong partner again and again. The mating ritual of Canadian geese is quite different, for after they have mated, which is usually in the water, the geese spray water on each other's backs with their beaks. After they have gotten good and wet, these newlywed geese turn, look each other in the face, and make snorting sounds.

There are approximately 10,000 resident geese on Long Island, and growing, said Mr. Sanford. Resident geese are birds that do not migrate. Many of these geese reside in the Hamptons. "These Canadian geese disturb many local sod farmers by distroying their crop," says Mark Lowery of the DEC.

There is a hunting season on Long Island which starts December 17 and ends January 31. Mr. Stanford said, "One can kill three Canadian geese a day," that is if one has a hunting license.

These graceful and beautiful birds usually have one leader guiding them. Mr. Sanford, who says no one exactly knows why they fly in formation, feels that all Canadian geese have an advanced social structure, a pecking order which keeps the leader through his navigational flight. Mr. Stanford went on to say that if one leader gets too exhausted, he will trade places with another bird.

The Canadian geese can be seen resting in Bridgehampton on Scuttlehole Road by the pond. Some say they have even seen hundreds of Canadian geese resting there. Mr. Stanford went on to say the fascinating birds were banded to mark their migration patterns in the 1940's. Later on, in the 1980's, they started to use the color code to identify the migration process.

The Canadian geese are truly fascinating birds, as one can see them gliding through the sky, flying low to the earth as they honk toward their far destination. One can still remember the first time seeing Canadian geese fly over in the sky, yet close enough to touch, with their honking cries like trumpets in the sky, headed toward the unknown, crying out to the wilderness.

the corner of the bed of my spare bedroom, if he now felt big and strong because he had been able to take advantage of a single woman without any family or big brothers to come over and beat him to a bloody pulp. I checked the size of his feet. From the look in his eye, I surmised that he knew that what he was doing was unethical or at the very least rude, and that I was right. But it gave him more than a small thrill to be able to get away with it.

He is gone, I breathe a sigh of relief and the search continues. I've recently been put in touch with someone who is the close friend of a good-hearted pal. We've had some preliminary chats by phone and from the few conversations that we've had, it seems we know what we want and what we don't and are at least philosophically on the same page. When things take a dark turn I'll admit that I become discouraged, but then I tell myself regardless of how difficult the process might seem at the time, I know that the right person will miraculously appear. It like most good things in life requires patience. I take comfort in the fact that life, in its abundance, will not be dull. ●

End Of The Season Party At Serafina's

Sunday, January 9th, was the annual end of the season party for Sarafina's Restaurant in Sag Harbor. The owners, Frank and Lynne were celebrating with friends, family and regulars, the end of another busy season. But don't worry, they will be back in March with a bigger and better menu for all to enjoy. They're off the the islands for a much needed vacation.

Shop'til You Drop With Maria Tennariello

After a nice long vacation from Dan's Papers, I decided I would start my shopping trip in Sag Harbor this week. As I was strolling along Main Street, I found some nice sales at some of the shops there. So let's do some millennium shopping! And... How about the temporary sales and use tax exemption on clothing and footwear from January 15 to January 21, 2000. Tax exempt items are all clothing, hats, shoes, yard goods, notions, diapers (adult and baby), scout uniforms, lingerie, bathing suits and accessories. This city and state tax-free exemption is on for Suffolk County; Nassau is only State exempt. How bout that! So my friends, let's shop 'til we drop!

At Zinnia, there is a "Millennium Sale" with fifty percent off there very classic merchandise, dresses, scarves, shoes, accessories and more. This store is laid out beautifully and has upscale, upbeat styles that are worth the trip. Nearby, Jill's is having a fifty percent off sale on her lovely dresses, sweaters, scarves, jewelry, accessories and much more. Don't forget Punch, the sale is incredible at forty percent to seventy percent off infants and children's clothing. Now is the time to stock up for all upcoming birthdays and special occasions. Across the street at Andrew & Co. there is alot of good quality children's clothing on sale too. Check the store for their special sales. The Ideal, also on Main Street has fifty percent off all Christmas merchandise. This great stationary/gift shop has lots of unique merchandise to choose from. Also, you will find the largest selection of newspapers and magazines. Heading west on Noyac Road, I stopped into The Whalebone Store and found all their incredible Christmas merchandise at half-off regular prices along with mittens and hats for children and adults at sale prices that can't be beat.

On to Southampton, where Christopher Fischer on Jobs Lane is showing off again. They are stocked with beautiful fine gauge cashmere shawl Pashmina's in lots of yummy colors that are ready to go! Colors tell your personality, I chose grape. There is tangerine, cantaloupe, aqua, apple green moss, butter, lemon and much more. The Pashmina's are special sale priced; buy one and get the second one (same size) for half off. The Pashmina's come in three different sizes, no one size fits all here. Cashmere pillows are specially sale priced at thirty percent off. All men's cashmere clothing comes in a variety of sherbet colors in V-neck and crew neck styles, sale priced. And the best part? The sales associates are friendly, sophisticated and always available to help you in any way they can. Thanks staff, for your friendly service. And you save the sales tax.

Only steps away at The Secret Closet where they are having their New Year's, New Millennium, New Decade and New Century Sale, along with tax-free exemption week, you can make out like a bandit here. Look for all fall/winter collections, including sweaters of mohair and the silk-cashmere, lamb leather separates and velvet and silk party clothing, dresses, skirts, tops and more at fifty percent to seventy percent off regular prices. Prices that were regularly $140 to $650 are now slashed from $59 to $199.

Titano on Nugent Street in Southampton is holding their twenty percent to forty percent off sale on shirts, ties, sweaters for men and women and twin sets and blouses at incredible savings! And... you will save even more with the tax-free week exemption. Titano has a brand new shipment of merchandise that has just arrived from Italy and is on sale as well. The winter store hours are Thursday through Monday from 10 to 6 p.m., although they will be open every day during tax-free week. Did you know that the Southampton Hospital Thrift Shop, located on Main Street will reopen on Thursday, January 20, 2000?

Shoe-Inn in East Hampton is winding down its Warehouse Sale with over 12,000 pair of their current footwear. All shoes are $25 to $75, nothing higher and boots valued to $475 are $100. Friday, Jan 14 is the last day, so get going. Bonnie Nuit is having the "Sale of the Century" and continues the celebration with twenty-five percent to seventy-five percent off storewide, until January 21. Hey, don't forget the sales tax exempt.

Heading out to Montauk for a gift certificate for my mom and my daughter Michele for "A Day of Beauty" or "Day Of Vitality" at Gurney's Inn Resort, Spa and Conference Center. You won't believe what this package includes. It's my way of saying thanks to my favorite family members for the nice things that they did for me in the 20th century. Call Gurney's Spa to make an appointment for a "Day" at 516-668-2509.

Until next week! Ciao and Happy Millennium Shopping.

ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

What can we say about a year whose only claim to fame is that it ended the decade? It would be nice to recall 1999, art-wise, and mark the beginnings of a new aesthetic trend, milestone event or some other signifying phenomenon. But, alas, we can't see any such thing: not only are we missing the "trees" in the forest, but perhaps the forest itself. Only time will tell.

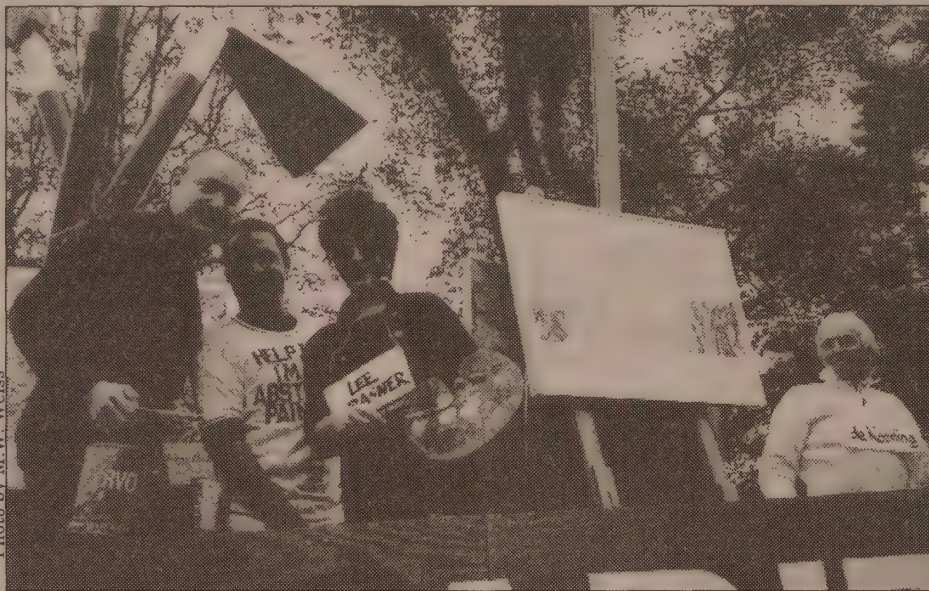

That's not to infer that 1999 has been an uneventful art year in the Hamptons. Thank goodness, there were no deaths like in 1998 when the community lost such special people, including Arline Wingate, Stanley Kearn, Helen Soreff and Elaine Benson. They are all still sorely missed.

But with death there is growth – and it is that single concept which characterizes 1999: Kimberly Goff taking over the helm of the Elaine Benson Gallery; new art spaces joining the scene (East Hampton's Pingree and Wally Findley Galleries, Bridgehampton's Artists Display Center (ADC), and Sag Harbor's Here and Now). The Elise Goodheart Fine Arts left Sag Harbor's Main Street and relocated to owner Goodheart's home.

There were other kinds of growths. For example, Guild

Hall got a new Director, Dr. Ruth Applehoff. However, some of the most significant growth sprung up in places

Hampton and Southampton Artists also sustaining their commitments.

Members of the Artists Alliance of East Hampton

Some local exhibits brought growth, too, and a fuller appreciation/understanding of a particular style or medium. Alfonso Ossorio's "Costume Design" show at the Ossorio Foundation was one such example as was the Parrish Museum's "Drawing Is Another Kind of Language," respectively.

There were also shows that challenged our ability to think about the nature of art, including Arlene Bujese's "Concept, Context, Coherence" and "The Life Shoot" featuring Jackson Pollock at the Pollock-Krasner House.

Finally, there was particular growth in individual achievements, notably in John Gruen's photographs ("Facing the Artist" at Guild Hall), Fred Stein's stills at Sag Harbor Picture Gallery, Dawoud Bey's portraits at the Parrish Museum, Rex Lau's paintings at Lizan Tops Gallery and April Gornik's landscapes at Glenn Horowitz Bookseller.

Now that we think about it, 1999 in the Hamptons has nothing to apologize for.

Anna and the King

ANNA AND THE KING

Hallelujah! Huzza! and OH, MAMA! I am a new man... saintly good and even.... NICE! Saintly? Yes. So much so, I'm going to give a nice review. Where's the tough guy? Well, he's been cowed! During the holiday season, like the other cranky ol' geezer, Ebenezer, I had frightening, revelatory presentiments. Mine were of the past, present and future films. The future was terrifying! Considering that almost 400 films were released last year and the billions of dollars they generated and more staggering... the huge number of vociferous people who are more than fans! I am, all at once, overwhelmed by an avalanche of unbridled movie mania and nit-picking by hundreds of would-be film critics.

Brought to my knees... I must be more cuddly, lenient and tolerant... Meet the NEW Mr. Nice guy... extolling the niceness of nicety, and with it the very nice, new rendition of the story of Anna Leonowens and the King of Siam.

SHALL WE DANCE?

The very curious, worlds-apart relationship of the 1860's, written with much conviction and candor, in Ms. Leonowens' diaries... then as a book by Margaret Landon... has been permanently imprinted upon us as a Technicolor Operetta, with highly singable songs which pictures Anna as a gorgeously Max Factored, warbling, not-so-Merry Widow-schoolmarm with poofy skirts and pulsating bodice who goes to work for an energetic (he has fifty-eight children) bare-footed and bare-headed, bronze-skulled, Waltz King who wears too much mascara and belts out orders and songs with a goulash-mishmosh-accent.

In a charming manner but, still Franz Lehar-turn-of-the-century frilly-silliness of song after song, punctuated by a few lines of dialogue, the glamorous couple swing, stamp and twirl their contentious ways to overcome the obstacles of their own individual old world mores to try to reach each other. This is the 1956 film of Rodgers and Hammerstein's Broadway musical, The King and I, and, I am afraid the only way most of the world will remember what is one of the most confounding and intriguing near love affairs of the century if one thinks about it. The new, non-musical version, Anna and the King does give it thought, reflection and intelligence, and fine, restrained performances by Jodie Foster as a quite controlled, yet tentative Anna and the charismatic, Hong Kong superstar, Chow Yun-Fat as King Mongkut who give the story resonant meaning and reserved emotion. Sure, but as with many others, you folks, caught in the sweet fly-paper of the past, will say, "Yeah, but where's the music?" OK, some other reviewers beg the same question. But, here's some beef as opposed to ham. You'll miss Yul Brenner's Hungarian bravado and authoritarian, head-biting off extravagance, you'll say? And what of Deborah Kerr's Julie Andrew's impersonation... so winning, so tartly regal and sweetly sticky? I say, give something closer to reality a fling.

GETTING TO KNOW YOU

Sleekly thinner, lovelier and as taut as a Victorian corset, Ms. Foster is all business... acting as keenly and as clearly as her blue eyes reflect her steely nature.

She gives the widow who traveled with her young son to Bangkok (where women still had no title to be addressed by) a cautious strength as she deals with the iron clad doctrines of the country and the soft languid charm of Mr. Chow who is warmer than steamy, Southeast Asia. Filmed in Malaysia, fabulous Palace settings and fascinating local pageantry have been recreated by designer, Luciana Arrighi and photographed by Caleb Deschanel... they all conspire to make this a most remarkably informative film. The sub plot story of Tuptim, the King's new wife, who escapes from the Palace to join her lover in a Buddhist monastery is sharply etched and beautifully acted by Bai Ling.

I WHISTLE A HAPPY TUNE

I am afraid that with all the exotic fervor filling this film... it may just not be enough. Politics, a military invasion and the demise of Colonialism, torture and a beheading are just not enough these days. It was enough for me! I enjoyed it lots, but hey, I'm a NICE guy. I like a nice movie... especially since this movie is like a microcosm of movies past, present and future (see original 1946 version with Rex Harrison and Irene Dunne). The movies ebb and flow with the tides, dousing us with drenchings of political correctness and dumbness... so watch for the next land fall... I am sure we haven't seen the last Anna and the King. But, for now, see this one... and Have a Nice Day.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

It's a New Year and a new Millennium with enough zero's in the number 2000 to create whimsical street-vended eyeglasses for celebrants to wear around Times Square on New Year's Eve.

And what about the food? Will the year 2000 bring major changes in what and the way we eat? I doubt it. Food changes all the time while classics happily remain. From Oysters Rockefeller and Waldorf salad at the turn of the last Century, to Cobb salad, tuna casseroles and TV dinners of the 50's, to Nouvelle Cuisine, a 1970's misguided idea of eating lightly on French cooking. Delightedly, the 1980's brought us pasta, risotto, designer pizzas and Mediterranean cooking. The 90's were rampant with fat-free products on supermarket shelves yet the obesity of America was a well-known fact in the press. To save the day comfort food became the buzz-word of the 90's.

How different then will food be? I'll wager that Caesar salad and a savory meatloaf are just a few of the taste memories that we'll take with us into the new Century.

CEASAR SALAD

Serves 4-6

- 1 fresh head Romaine lettuce
- 1-2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
- 1 tin anchovies, drained
- 1 cup croutons, preferably home-made*
- 1 7-minute cooked egg
- 2 tablespoons red wine or lemon juice
- 5-6 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
- Coarse salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
- 5-6 tablespoons grated Parmigiano cheese

1. Discard any bruised outer leaves. Cut away and discard heavy white membrane at base of leaves where necessary.

2. Wash lettuce, spin dry in a salad spinner then carefully roll up in paper towel to absorb excess moisture. Can be done ahead to this point. Place in airtight plastic bag and refrigerate for several hours or overnight if desired. If refrigerating the greens ahead, let stand at room temperature for an hour or so.

3. Place egg in a small saucepan of cold water. Bring slowly to the edge of a boil, then simmer for 7 minutes. Remove with slotted spoon and cool under running water and shell. Set aside.

4. Prepare dressing: Place finely chopped garlic in bottom of large salad bowl. Add anchovies and with a fork, mash into the garlic. Cut egg into the anchovy garlic mixture and mash. Add croutons and wine vinegar and stir to mix. Add salt and pepper to taste, then stir in the olive oil, one tablespoon at a time, incorporating the oil after each addition. Set aside.

5. Just prior to serving, place the greens over the dressing and toss vigorously. Be sure all the leaves are well coated with the dressing. Sprinkle over Parmigiano cheese and toss briefly to mix. Serve at once.

*Croutons: Cut about 1/3 loaf of crusty French or Italian bread into 1/4-inch cubes. Yield about 1 cup. Put enough oil in a heavy (iron) skillet or deep fryer (about 1/2 inch) and when hot (about 380 degrees) put in bread cubes. Fry until they turn golden brown on both sides. Transfer to a paper towel-lined dish and let drain. Cool and use in salads. Can be made ahead in larger batches. Put in a paper towel lined tin and store in a dry cool place. They will keep for weeks.

MEATLOAF

The brown sugar and seasoned bread crumb topping tops off this light and moist meatloaf sweetly. A meat loaf pan with an inner lining allows the fat to drip out while baking.

Serves 4-6

- 1 1/2 pounds ground beef
- 1 medium onion, finely chopped
- 1 cup canned whole tomatoes with some juice
- 2 eggs, beaten
- 3-4 tablespoons ketchup
- 3 tablespoons grainy Dijon mustard
- 3 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
- 2-3 drops tabasco
- 2 slices white bread, moistened with water
- Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

Topping

- 1 1/2 tablespoons brown sugar
- 1 1/2 tablespoons dry bread crumbs
- 1/2 teaspoon dry mustard
- 1/8 teaspoon ground nutmeg

Preheat oven to 375 degrees

1. Place beef in a large mixing bowl. Add onions, and tomatoes, breaking the tomatoes up with a large spoon. Continue with beaten eggs, ketchup, mustard, Worcestershire and tabasco and stir to mix. Squeeze the moistened bread and crumble the pieces into the mixture. Season to taste with salt and pepper and stir everything until ingredients are thoroughly incorporated. Pack into a 9 x 5 x 3 inch meatloaf pan and set aside.

2. In a small mixing bowl, mix the brown sugar, bread crumbs, dry mustard and nutmeg. Stir to mix. Spread mixture over the top of the meat loaf and place on a cookie sheet in preheated oven. Bake for 45-50 minutes. Cut into slices for serving.

Serve with mashed or baked potatoes and freshly cooked broccoli or spinach.

The off-season is always a perfect time to check in with your favorite restaurants and explore new places you've been meaning to try. The East End's incredible selection of first-rate restaurants are now minus the crowds, parking problems and high noise-levels that can be such a deterrent in the summer and during the holidays. And the off-season is easy on your pocketbook too? Look through the papers this time of year and you'll find some real dining bargains. Prix fixes and specials abound and reservations are a breeze.

It's Our Garden WITH ELIZABETH AND CROW MILLER

Gardening, which we are all interested in, offers more opportunities to put meaning and productivity into our lives than perhaps any other hobby or activity. Working with the soil and helping it to produce, satisfies the basic human urge to keep in contact with the foundation of life, because it is the Earth under our feet, that, more than anything, influences how we live.

Organic gardening returns to us what we put into it. If our goals are limited, our returns are small. That is true of life in general. We all know there is a risk of overdoing our garden plan. In the coziness of our winter homes it is easy to lay out garden rows that are too long, or to visualize an orchard that is beyond the scope of our power to manage. That is poor planning, an act executed in haste without adequate forethought.

I think that there is a way for us to expand our horizons and to add new dimensions of satisfaction to our lives by trying to get more out of our gardens than we are now producing. The first step is to study and learn.

Just because you are beyond the age of youth, don't feel that your time for schooling has passed. There are many senior citizens attending workshops and classes here at the Spring Meadow School of Organic Farming and Gardening every year. There is also a lot that can be learned from magazines, newspapers, seed catalogs and books. Leisure hours devoted to studying and reading are bound to pay off.

As you study and learn, keep in mind that one of the most basic things you are trying to do is to increase your powers of observation. Too many of us are not able to see what is around us in the world because we haven't learned how to look.

For example, a gardener who is experienced and well educated can look at a corner of land and know the names of the plants growing there. They will know the good plants from the weeds.

Many of the people who are not satisfied with what they are doing in life have not developed the powers of observation to know what there is to do that is enjoyable. Everyone is different, and has different positive qualities and weaknesses. You have to see and experience many of the things that life has to offer before you can find what really appeals to you. That is where learning comes in. Only by gaining new knowledge can you increase your power to look at, and really see more of the things around you.

So start first, by looking around in your garden; many of the answers to our problems are there. We just have to learn to recognize them.

Elizabeth and Crow Miller are the proprietors of The Spring Meadow Organic Farming and Gardening Research Center in Southold.

HEALTH, SPORTS & FITNESS

Forget Diets And Lose Weight

"This year I really have to work out some more." "I really have to lose more weight." Sound familiar? How many of us make these very common resolutions, only to see them fall flat a few weeks later? Awhile back, Men's Health mentioned that health club memberships tend to peak in December and January (to prepare for the New Year), and then again in the beginning of the summer. The Journal of the American Medical Association says that two-thirds of Americans are trying to lose or maintain their weight (October 13, 1999 JAMA). Everyone knows that diet and exercise are the most effective ways to lose weight and tone up. We can always go to a gym and get "Chet" or "Mandi," our personal trainers to help us out with the exercises. When it comes however, to the inevitable face-off between us and our refrigerators at dinnertime – it's a different story completely. Fear not! An appropriate exercise program combined with sensible, easy-to-understand diet tips, will have you in shape for bathing suit season in no time.

The members of the American Dietetic Association wisely advises us to forget fads and to focus on the five food groups. Most health professionals advise against diets that single out certain foods or food groups, suggesting they can create more problems in the long run, such as backlash weight gain. The now famous Atkins Diet, which advises ingesting heavy amounts of protein at the expense of carbohydrates has, to put it mildly, had its fair share of critics. Linda Quinn, MS, RD and representative for the New York State Dietetic Association, advocates a more sensible approach toward dieting. "This New Year, we want Americans to focus on the foods they can have, and not on those they can't have." She adds, "New research is now discovering thousands of substances, in addition to vitamins and minerals that are good for our health. By making and eating dishes that incorporate these foods you will be providing your whole family with important nutrients that can safeguard them against disease and keep their immune system strong during the winter months."

One nutrient high on the must-have list is calcium, found most abundantly in milk and other dairy products. Bonnie Taub-Dix, MA, RD, CDN, nutritional consultant and representative of the New York State Dietetic Association says, "Think of calcium in your bones as money in the bank. If you make regular deposits now, it will be there when you need it in the future."

Helene Messner, MS, RD, with the American Dairy Association points out that one of the easiest ways to trim fat and calories without compromising calcium intake is to replace whole milk with lowfat or fat free milk. "This easy change can really add up," she says. "If you drink or cook with two (8-ounce) glasses of whole milk a day, switch to fat free and you'll save 129 calories a day. At the end of twenty-seven days, you could lose up to a pound. After a year, you may lose twelve pounds without really trying!"

By following these tips, along with an appropriate exercise program, the weight will come off – and you won't have had to starve yourself in the process.

Best of luck and have a happy, healthy New Year!

–Dave Ganulin

What Is Feng Shui?

If you were to mention the words "feng shui" in the United States just five years ago, most people would have responded "feng what"? But with much media attention today, you have probably heard of feng shui. Currently there are about 150 books on the subject, Oprah has had a guest discuss it and Donald Trump consults with a master before purchasing new buildings.

Pronounced "fung shway," translated it means "wind and water" which symbolizes the two major forces of nature. This ancient Taoist "Art of Placement" has been practiced for over 3,000 years.

In Asia, feng shui masters were originally employed to locate the most auspicious site for a tomb of departed loved ones. A feng shui master with a luopan (Chinese compass) would locate a site perfectly situated between mountain ranges, near the bend of a river or valley where ancestral spirits could be in harmony with heaven and earth.

Over time, Feng Shui grew to detailed observations of the living world and the way in which earth's energy affects all of daily life. The underlying principle of Feng Shui is to live in harmony with our environment so that the energy surrounding you works for you rather than against you.

The most important concept in achieving good Feng Shui is Chi (pronounced Chee). Translated it means "breath." Chi is the single most important factor that affects our lives. The energy force that exists around us also exists within us. The strength of our health, level of motivation, ability to express ourselves, be creative, open our hearts, generate money, attract relationships are all influenced by Chi.

In Feng Shui, the practitioner tries to manipulate the surroundings so that the flow of environmental chi enhances and adjusts human chi so the people can live more positive, healthy, and prosperous lives.

Here in the West, feng shui is not a science, as its principles cannot yet be proven by scientific method. It is not a religion, nor is it necessary to follow any religion to understand or practice feng shui. It is not a philosophy as it encompasses many practical tools and techniques. It is not a belief system. Asking someone if they believe in feng shui is like asking them if they believe in the weather. It's not a question of faith but a fact of life.

Martha Rohl is a Feng Shui Consultant and lecturer from Babylon, New York. A graduate of the Metropolitan Institute of Interior Design, she has an extensive background in Feng Shui having studied with many of the world's prominent feng shui practitioners.

POLICE BLOTTER

BEST OF THE BLOTTER 1999: PART ONE

Most of the kitchen disappeared from the Lobster Roll restaurant in Napeague while it was closed between Christmas and New Years of 1999. When the owner of said Lobster Roll arrived to re-open said restaurant on January 7, he discovered that not only had burglars taken the cash register, but they also took the Fry-O-laters, a couple of steam tables and a sideboard. The kitchen crooks took the time to disconnect plumbing and electric fittings before removing the aforementioned equipment. Police believe it would have taken a rather large truck to make off with the aforementioned items.

Bare breasts disrupted the St. Patrick's Day Parade in Montauk on March 21. An unidentified woman allegedly bared her breasts repeatedly to onlookers while riding in a limousine specially equipped with a hot tub from Bob Marc Limousine Service in Deer Park. The aforementioned woman wore a thong bikini which barely covered her body. Spectators complained and the limousine company apologized for the unplanned spectacle.

A jug of water allegedly started a fire at a Quogue residence on April 5. Sometime in early March, said jug of water was delivered to said Quogue residence and was left outside on the deck where it allegedly started the fire. The aforementioned jug of water was allegedly left on top of a rope rug on the aforementioned deck. Sun streaking through said water allegedly caused said rope rug to catch on fire on April 5, nearly a month later. Four firetrucks carrying 23 firefighters responded to the scene and spent about an hour controlling the blaze.

A Bridgehampton man allegedly broke into his girlfriend's house and stole her dirty laundry on April 14. Michael J. Feaster and the aforementioned girlfriend, Sophonia Reeder, were allegedly involved in a shouting match on that date when police heard the noise. Feaster was asked to leave the premises, which he did. However, later in the day police made a run past the location at which time it was discovered that someone had broken into Sophonia's apartment. Mr. Feaster was allegedly leaving the scene with a plastic laundry basket in his possession. Inside the aforementioned basket were an assortment of Sophonia's laundry including her pajamas, several pillowcases and a selection of her underwear. Feaster was charged with burglary.

On May 11, more than $13,000 worth of missing jewelry was found hidden in a pair of sneakers owned by a Springs man. Said jewelry belonged to a friend of said man who had reported the jewels missing the day before. The woman who owned the aforementioned jewelry had placed said jewels in a bag in her car and had planned to transport them to an appraiser. While said jewels were in said car, said woman gave the aforementioned man a ride in the aforementioned car. It was after that ride that the jewels disappeared. The jewels, which included a ruby bracelet, two watches and a man's necklace, were found in the aforementioned man's sneakers after said man failed a lie detector test. Marcos Roberto Mendez was charged with possession of stolen property and grand larceny. Marcos was held on $50,000 bail because he also had in his possession a plane ticket back to his native Costa Rica.

Police were alerted to the fact that a man was gyrating and making strange motions with his hands in Herrick Park on May 1. Upon investigation, it was discovered that the man was in fact practicing Tai Chi, a form of martial art developed in ancient China.

A mother and son from Queens allegedly shared a day of shoplifting in the Hamptons on June 12. The pair allegedly hit shops from Montauk to Southampton and select locations in between before being apprehended in East Hampton. Police suspected something when they reportedly saw a middle aged woman scurrying down Newtown Lane with a pair of sweatpants under her arm which still bore a $65 price tag. Following rapidly behind said woman was a screaming shop owner from Above the Potatoes. As the aforementioned woman attempted to get into her Mercedes, police arrested her. As they put her into the squad car, her son jumped out of the aforementioned Mercedes and protested the arrest, then allegedly attempted to free his mother. Said son was asked to show police the contents of said Mercedes which he did. In the backseat, police reportedly found several wooden hangers, but in the truck they discovered over $3,000 worth of merchandise with the tags still intact. At that time, the son was arrested as well. Marlene Deborah Kessler and her son Jon David Kessler were each charged with criminal possession of stolen property and several misdemeanor charges of petit larceny.

Richard F. Green, a.k.a. Rooster, watched anxiously from the dock in Montauk in June as rescue workers searched desperately for a fisherman believed to have fallen overboard. A Coast Guard helicopter, a police patrol boat and a diver scoured the area around the Sharon G., a dragger docked at Gosman's, from which the aforementioned fisherman was believed to have fallen. The skipper of the Sharon G. had notified police that one of his crew members had been missing for about three hours and may have fallen overboard. The crew member they were searching for turned out to be the aforementioned Rooster. An hour after the search began, someone spotted Rooster standing on the dock nearby. Rooster had not fallen overboard. He had gone into town to have some breakfast.

THE BUCK STOPPED WHERE?

Dear Dan,

I enjoy reading your Dan's Papers every week. I think it offers a good amount of Long Island in the past, as well as in the present and the future. However, I think you did a great injustice to Don Duga, the artist on page forty-nine of the December 17, 1999 issue, you honor as the cover artist. You print his works in reverse. Note his signature. What happened to your proof-reading dept?

NOT THE BEST WAY TO GO

Dear Dan,

I was disappointed to read your article about Quake at the RECenter. I too think that the RECenter is one of the most important facilities on the East End. As a mother of three, I eagerly awaited the opening, in addition to supporting the center through my husband's business.

However, again as a mother and as a school psychologist, I was one of the parents who spoke to several people involved with the RECenter about my concern about Quake II being offered as recreation for our children. First of all, Quake II (and games similar to it) is rated Mature. This rating means the game is intended for seventeen years-old and above. Our children are allowed to stay at the RECenter, unaccompanied, from eleven years and up. In fact, the parents aren't even allowed to be there with them! I think having games available for their use that are totally inappropriate is not acceptable. Parents are constantly bombarded by media and communication choices. We rely on the ratings to help us decide what is appropriate for our children since we cannot preview every single thing that becomes available on the market.

I also do not think it is necessary to offer a game that involves children simulating the experience of holding a large handgun and spending their time killing. This is not a rifle range type game; it simulates deadly play. Didn't we read that the killers from Columbine loved to play Doom (which is similar to Quake II)? There has been a lot of research carried out over the last few decades showing that violent play and violence in the media begets violence. One particular study had 200 high school children play two types of video games. Fifty percent of them played Mortal Combat, a game whose scoring is achieved by ripping heads off and cutting apart enemies. The other fifty percent played Helicopter Rescue, a game that is exciting because it has floods and fires, but is about rescuing people. After being paid accordingly for their participation, they were given the opportunity to donate to charity. Fourteen percent of the students who played Mortal Combat gave to United Way, compared to seventy three percent of the students who played Helicopter Rescue.

That's a significant difference! It worried me that some of the quotes you gave from the children bemoaned that there would be nothing to do if they couldn't play these violent games.

One person went to say, "...plus, it lets you beat on your friends without actually doing it." How about some real physical activity to compensate for this need to beat others up.

I truly hope the RECenter can be a place for our young people to hang out, to participate in recreation, and to have fun. There are times set aside for older teens, so different types of activities could be made available for them. However, condoning violence and relying on passive entertainment as a sole means of recreation does not seem the best way to go.

Sharyn Lawall, Psy.D.

HOW ABOUT DOUBLE DECKERS?

Dear Dan,

In reference to your article on the shuttle bus, which is indeed a necessity, how about a double decker, open top, like the touring buses in the city? In "shuttle size" they would be fun to ride and very usable. I think they would sell themselves.

SEEK AND YOU SHALL FIND

Dear Dan,

I still enjoy reading your stuff and usually find something I can learn from your writing. I was especially interested to read about your temple experience a few months ago. A similar search for my own spiritual roots a few years ago led me to accepting Jesus as my Messiah. I encourage you to continue to look, keeping your eyes and mind open to God.

I'm glad to see that Wags is still among us and hope that your new pooch fits right in.

HOMESICK AFTER ALL THESE YEARS

Dear Dan,

I visited a family in Bridgehampton quite often back in the early '90s before relocating to North Carolina. I still have in-laws there and it's really great to stay in touch with the happenings there without picking up the telephone. Your articles help with the home sickness even after all these years. Keep up the good work.

- Do you use your pool as a part of your physical fitness regimen?
✓ Commercial Clearwater can make sure that you have the healthiest environment for exercise.

- Would you like your pool to be as safe as it can be for you and your loved ones?
✓ Manual pool care is often messy, and proper care is usually not taken. Commercial Clearwater
Controllers and Monitoring Systems keep a "watchful eye" on water quality around the clock. They make precise adjustments in chemical additions according to constant water testing and keep pools in top condition.

- Would you like to try any of our Controllers or Monitoring Systems for one month free; on charge, no obligation?
✓ Just call us at (516) 365-0345, and ask for Robert.
